Buick Dealers to View Great Proving Ground

General Motors Will Be Host to 3800 Agents From All Sections

FLINT, MICH.—The Buick Motor Company this week launched one of its most ambitious projects of its sort ever undertaken, when it devoted two days to entertaining here at the General Motors Proving Ground, the first contingent of its 3,800 dealers, the majority of whom will be similarly entertained during the next nine weeks.

The plan was developed at the suggestion of the dealers themselves. The thought behind it is to show them at close range the methods and materials which enter into manufacture of Buick motor cars. When they leave Flint, they will carry to their homes throughout the country a new appreciation of the product which they sell, and their enthusiasm, Buick executives believe, will communicate itself to their organizations, with stimulating effect. For the dealers, when they leave here, will have spent virtually an entire day inspecting the Buick factory; they will have studied in detail the part the famous Proving Ground is playing in the development of fine motor cars, and they will have enjoyed contact with Buick's executives.

The dealers are coming to Flint on special Pullman trains, on which they will live during the one-night lie-over here. The dealer organization has been divided up by the Buick branch and distributor territories for ease of accommodation.

"The Family Upstairs" at Lomita

Cecille Evans, Virginia Valli and Allan Simpson in "THE FAMILY UPSTAIRS" A WILLIAM FOX SUPRAME ATTRACTION

A story that takes place behind the closed doors of half the homes in America will be on the Lomita Theatre screen this week in "The Family Upstairs," a human comedy drama of the lives of average people. The Hellers, who are the "Family Upstairs," live in the Minnehaha, an apartment of the kind in which you walk upstairs to save $10. The average American either knows the Hellers first hand or is a member of the great Heller tribe. Mother Heller is the type of a woman that the family always calls "mama," no matter how old they are. Pa Heller earns $35 a week, and the children have their troubles.

Virginia Valli, Allan Simpson, J. Farrell MacDonald, Lillian Elliott, Edward Piel, Jr., Cecille Evans and Jacqueline Wells are in the cast of "The Family Upstairs," which is scheduled for Sunday and Monday.

"Fig Leaves," starring that popular pair, George O'Brien and Olive Borden, is on the screen tonight and tomorrow. The cast also includes such favorites as Phyllis Haver, Dorothy Dunbar and Charles Conklin. History seldom tells the intimate details of the lives of famous people, hence little has been written of the private life of Adam and Eve. "Fig Leaves" remedies this, both for Adam and Eve of old, and the Adams and Eves of the present day—a story of the women who always have "nothing to wear." Olive Borden, as her screen admirers may well imagine, makes a most admirable and appealing Eve.

"April Fool" stars Alexander Carr on Saturday, and on Tuesday and Wednesday a double feature bill is scheduled, with "The Blackguard," starring beautiful Jane Novak, and "The Power of the Weak," with Alice Calhoun in the leading role, heading an all-star cast. "The Blackguard" is a smashing spectacle, full of drama and fire, and "The Power of the Weak" carries a gripping heart interest of romance in the great outdoors.

There also are the usual amusing comedies and added features.

Building Teeth
Feeding for teeth is begun before the child is born. It is continued by the mother during the nursing period and concluded by the child when he eats for himself.

The child's deciduous teeth begin to erupt five months before he is born. At birth the crowns are almost calcified. Even the six year molars have some calcium deposited before birth.

When the child is six months old the enamel is all formed on the inside first set of teeth. A perfect set of deciduous teeth depends almost wholly upon the diet of the mother during pregnancy and the nursing period. Her diet should be rich in minerals, especially in calcium and in vitamins. Milk is the best food for calcium. Cheese and eggs are good too. Vegetables such as cabbage, carrots, celery, cauliflower, spinach give calcium. These foods are especially high in the necessary vitamins, with the exception of vitamin D. This is best supplied through cod-liver oil, and is most especially needed for bone and teeth growing. The most important period for the permanent set of teeth is between two and twelve years of age when the crown of the last molar is finished. What the young child eats will determine the quality of his permanent set of teeth.

Defective teeth handicap a child. They cannot resist the attack of bacteria. Poor teeth are costly. Food given to decayed teeth is good grist taken to a poor mill. Grave disturbances, such as rheumatism, erroneously called "growing pains" and heart trouble often follow diseased teeth. Adult dental disease is largely resultant from poor teeth development in prenatal and postnatal life.

Give the child some hard food to chew daily. To the babies give dry bread or zwieback. The older child needs finely cut vegetables such as cabbage, celery and fruits in addition to the dry bread. Through chewing hard food the muscles of the jaws are strengthened and the blood-flow stimulated to these parts.

Mouth cleanliness helps to keep the sound teeth sound, and the weak teeth from becoming worse.

In spite of the best care, weak spots do occur sometimes in a tooth when calcification has been interrupted by the effects of such diseases as scarlet fever and whooping cough. Such spots are ready prey to bacteria and must be rectified in so far as possible through dentistry.

A sound set of teeth is evidence of good nutrition and a guaranty for continued good nutrition.—Christmas Seal Service.
